“I have yet to put de Gournay wallpaper in front of a client without her enthusiastically shouting, ‘Yes!’” says the American interior designer Jeffrey Bilhuber. “The product is bulletproof.” Less well known to de Gournay devotees is the company’s hand-painted porcelain. This spring he collaborated with the British brand on a new collection of plates decorated with sprouting tulips and streaked with molten gold. “It cross-pollinates beautifully,” Bilhuber says. “It complements a simple Venetian glass on a lacquered surface as well as a crystal goblet on polished wood.” S.B.
